

MONTANA COWBOY EVANGELIST WILL BE AT OAKLIHURST

Herbert J. Ranton, Son of Infidel and Skeptic, Now
Saving Souls

'SHADOWS,' ZEPP THEME

Zion Lutheran and Bristol M.
E. Churches to Have Illustrations Shown

Herbert J. Ranton, the cowboy evangelist, will speak at Oaklihurst Chapel, South Langhorne, Sunday. Although preachers and ministers of the Gospel of today have been through college and seminaries and most all have had Christian home surroundings, this cowboy was born and raised in the wilds of Montana with an infidel father and a mother who was a skeptic and who advised him never to become a Christian and "make a fool" of himself. Mr. Ranton will preach at both services, 10.30 a. m. and 7.45 p. m., and will dress in cowboy uniform Sunday evening. A testimonial from S. Hutchings, captain of Salvation Army, LaPorte City, Ind., says: "If you desire straight from the shoulder preaching, and souls saved, Rev. Ranton is the man." Rev. W. A. Scholer, Evangelical Association, Lansing, Mich., says: "I can truthfully say H. J. Ranton is a mighty preacher of the Gospel."

On Tuesday evening, February 24th, at 7.45, Dr. George McNeely, pastor of the Baptist City Temple, Newark, N. J., and well known as the brilliant Irish orator, will speak. Dr. McNeely also has preached for some time in the First Baptist Church, Broadway and 79th street, New York City, when crowds filled the church to overflowing to hear this brilliant orator.

"The Sleeping Churches of Today," (Prov. 24:33) "Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep," and (Isa. 52:1) "Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion"; B. Y. P. U., 7 p. m. evening worship, 7.45, "Shadows." The sermon will be based on the four verses of the hymn, "Only Shadows," by A. H. Ackley. There are shadows of sorrow that darken life's way. They are only shadows, but behind the dark shadows shines love's kindly ray. They are only shadows.

There are shadows of fear bringing thoughts that dismay. They are only shadows. If we walk in His love they will all pass away. They are only shadows.

There are shadows of doubt that steal into our mind. They are only shadows. If we look to the cross blest assurance we find. They are only shadows.

There are shadows of death that are black with despair. They are only shadows. For Christ Jesus, the Light of the world, will be there. They are only shadows.

The four Argus sisters will sing the hymn at the close of the sermon.

COLONIAL DAMES POUR TEA FOR TRAVEL CLUB

Pleasant Afternoon Program
Marks the Observance of Washington's Birthday

READINGS AND MUSIC

Atmosphere of the days of Washington was lent to the program of the Travel Club yesterday afternoon when the hostesses and those who poured during the tea-time were garbed as Colonial dames.

Musical numbers, both vocal and instrumental, pleased the Travel Club members and their guests; with readings interspersing these selections.

Miss Elizabeth Cornell, of Ivyland, captivated with her charm and personality, and ably interpreted several varied readings by change of facial expression and gesture.

The first number given from Miss Cornell's repertoire depicted a young woman of 18 operating an automobile which had been presented to her as a birthday gift, which ride nearly ended in catastrophe on several occasions throughout the tour. Other numbers by the reader were: "The Newlyweds Go Fishing," "Dreamin' in de Twilight," and "The Little Old Fashioned Girl." The two latter were with musical accompaniments by Mrs. Marburg D. Weagley.

A pupil of Miss Cornell, Miss Vivian Bliss, of Hatboro, read "The Minuet," the piano accompaniment being by Miss Cornell. Miss Bliss was attractive in costume of the days of the minuet, and the piece was added to by the graceful steps of the old-time dance.

Musical numbers of the afternoon were: Piano solo, variations of "Old Black Joe" (Foster), Mrs. Marburg D. Weagley; vocal trio, "February" (Calver), Mrs. Charles I. Bowen, Mrs. Linton Martin and Miss Grace Shaver; violin solo, "Farewell to Cucullain" (Kreisler), William Seidle, of Philadelphia; vocal solo, "Second Minuet" (Besley), Mrs. Bowen; violin solo, "Midnight Bells" (Kreisler), Mr. Seidler.

Of a patriotic nature were the decorations of the club-room. Two large American flags were placed, one at either side of the platform. Bouquets of red and white carnations were attractive, and the table at which the Colonial dames in their billowy skirts, powdered wigs and frilled caps poured, was prettily in its decorations of patriotic colors.

Previous to serving of refreshments the "Travel Club Tea Song" was sung by the group to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne."

WINS CONTINUE FOR BRISTOL HIGH TEAMS

Girls Snatch Victory From The George School
Sextet

BOYS DOWN HATBORO

By Leon Schiffer

Snatching victory from almost certain defeat, the local girls yesterday succeeded in defeating their perennial enemy, George School, by the close score of 32 to 28.

Holding the lead up until the end of the first half by the score of 18 to 12, the visitors had all the prospects of victory in their favor. However, the besiegers had one disadvantage—they didn't know the size and strength of the true Bristolian heart.

Starting early in the third quarter amid the cheers and yells of the crowd, the local girls soon tied the score with Wyatt's even half-dozen field goals and following this up by taking over the lead with DeLissio's quartette of double-deckers.

The beginning of the fourth quarter saw the local sextet ahead by the score of 23 to 24. In the latter part of the period, with the scoreboard reading 24 to 26 in Bristol's favor the visitors made a magnificent attempt to rally, but the local girls proved to be their superiors and the final whistle found the Cardinal and Gray leading the George School aggregation by the score of 32 to 28.

In the preliminary game of the afternoon the visitors' second team succeeded in downing the Cardinal and Gray second team by the score of 48 to 27.

Continuing its run of good luck, the local quintet journeyed to Hatboro last night, where they annexed their seventh straight victory by the score of 24 to 23.

Although the local boys were slightly off form Thursday night in their game with Yardley, they were in fine condition to take over the Hatboro "batters."

The Cardinal and Gray started a scoring lull in the early part of the game when Herman succeeded in dropping a duet of double-deckers through the cords for the count of four to nothing. As the lead was steadily increased by the field goals of Herman and Tullio, Coach Townsend sent his entire Junior Varsity team into the game. Even then the worst the Hatboro "batters" could do was make

TRAIN CRASH TIES UP TRAFFIC FOUR HOURS

Two Hurt, Brakeman Seriously
In Collision at Frankford Junction

FIRE ADDS CONFUSION

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 21.—(INS)—Sixty-five freight cars were scattered over the Pennsylvania Railroad right-of-way, and two men injured, one seriously, when two freight trains crashed at the Frankford Junction early this morning.

All traffic over the New York Division was tied up for four hours.

John Burchell, 32, of South Clinton avenue, Trenton, brakeman, was injured so seriously he may die. He was catapulted out of his caboose on one of the trains, landing on the track below. He sustained a fractured skull and a broken leg. Burchell was taken to the Frankford Hospital.

John Randall, 35, workman, was the second man hurt. He was injured while trying to clear away debris, being bowled over by a train. Randall was likewise taken to the Frankford Hospital, but the extent of his injuries have not as yet been determined.

The collision occurred apparently when one of the trains passed a stop signal, and struck the rear of a train ahead, railway officials said.

The second train composed of 35 box and tank cars struck with such force the impact was heard for a dozen blocks. Box and tank cars were bowled over like ten-pins, and one rolled over the tracks and down a ten-foot embankment to Trenton avenue, blocking the street.

Fire then broke out among the wrecked cars, immediately after the collision, adding to the confusion. Three alarms were sent in but electric wires scattered over the track prevented firemen from getting near the scene for an hour.

Damage will amount to many thousands of dollars train officials said.

WASHINGTON PORTRAITS

Two or three biographers of recent days, in an apparent effort to blot out Parson Weems' picture of Washington who couldn't or wouldn't tell a lie, have painted the Father of His Country in contrary colors. They have gone to the other extreme. Certainly they will fail if they try to picture him as a profane, swash-buckling cavalier, defiant of conventions and boastful of deeds. There is too much documentary evidence to the contrary.

"Happy in the confirmation of our independence and sovereignty," wrote General Washington in 1783, resigning his commission as commander-in-chief of the army, "and pleased with the opportunity afforded the United States of becoming a respectable nation, I resign with satisfaction the appointment accepted with diffidence; a diffidence in my ability to accomplish so arduous a task, which, however, was superseded by a confidence in the rectitude of our cause, the support of the supreme power of the union, and the patronage of Heaven."

Other more familiar passages from his speeches and writings will bear like testimony, that some of these new pictures of George Washington are caricatures, not portraits. Probably the real Washington may be found some place between Weems of the Nineteenth Century and Rupert Hughes of the Twentieth.

PRESS FREEDOM DEFINED

Minnesota's newspaper "gag" law outraged the freedom of the press in that state and yet the nation owes it a debt of gratitude for inspiring a discourse which is certain to act as a deterrent upon other legislatures that are asked to deprive the people of the protection of a free press.

Justice Brandeis, of the United States supreme court, delivered that discourse during the course of the argument testing the constitutionality of the assailed statute.

The statute permits suppression of a newspaper for publication of "malicious, scandalous or defamatory" matter, and in the case in question it was invoked against a publication which assailed the police department of Minneapolis for allegedly protecting gambling.

"We do not know," said Justice Brandeis, "whether these charges are true or false but we do know that such criminal combinations exist to the shame of our cities. What this newspaper did seems like an effort to expose such a combination. Now, was not that a privileged communication, if there ever was one? It is difficult to see how there could be a free press without the privilege this Minnesota act seeks to limit. This newspaper set out on a crusade to rid the city of certain evils. It invited suit for criminal libel if what it said was not true. If that campaign was not privileged—if that is not one of the things for which the press chiefly exists—then for what does it exist?"

Justice Brandeis was not speaking for the whole court, but if the supreme court upholds this law it will be adding force behind a blow at the freedom of the press and strengthening a ready weapon in the hands of corrupt officials and complacent courts for intimidation of newspapers into connivance or corruption.

OLD COMPANY'S LEHIGH ANTHRACITE

"MURDER AT EAGLE'S NEST"

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

Bhima Martin, called "Bim," young reporter, is anxious to aid her father's small-town newspaper. He rejects the marriage proposals of Walter Vance, Assistant Chief of Police. Walter asks Bim not to attend a party given by wealthy Emily Hardy, in honor of the decrepit Baron von Wiese and his naughty young wife. Ted Frost, town play-boy and husband of patient Mary Frost, is enamored of the Baroness. As the butler serves wine the Baroness stares at him. Their eyes meet and, stunned, he drops a glass.

CHAPTER III.

THE deep silence which followed the tinkle of shattering glass was wiped out when everyone began to talk at once.

Bim raw embarrassed red slide over the butler's face under Emily Hardy's glare just before the man bent down with a swiftness, graceful ease to gather the splinters. And she saw, or thought she saw, something else as well—something far more intriguing.

It was only for an instant that the man stooped so his red mop was below the level of the table and he arose slowly, keeping his eyes down as if they still searched for bits of glass. Then, as his head came up beside the Baroness, who still stared into the mirror on the opposite wall, Bim would have sworn that he said something—that he spoke a word or two between the rattle of conversation.

It was over in a flash and he was gone, but Bim fancied that the long, dark eyes of the guest of honor narrowed ever so slightly though her head did not move.

A Night For Love.

Em elected to have coffee on the terrace outside the dining room at the southeast corner of the house and the dinner guests strolled out on the flagstones, there to loll upon the cushions of huge wicker chairs.

It was a warm, still night hung with a thin sliver of moon and rimmed about by the lights across the river far below Eagle's Nest. White ghost flowers on a vine nearby filled the air with fragrance and from somewhere up the mountain music came stealing to their ears faintly and sweetly.

A night for romance, a night for love. And Bim thought of Walter with a pang of regret. She was very fond of Walter; he was all that Dad had said and more. Only . . . well, she always had loved Walter.

Besides she wanted from life something more than just marriage. She felt within herself the ability to do wonderful things and she wanted her chance. If only Dad were not so conservative, so set in his ways about the Banner. He made her tone down everything she wrote to a point where all the thrill in writing was lost; the big bugbear of her life was what he called "yellow journalism." But of course nothing ever happened in Kingcliffe to be yellow about. It was discouraging; it was really.

She fell to studying the dinner guests, wondering what each was thinking. Peter Hardy had been obliged to assist the old Baron to his feet and Em and Peter between them had practically carried the old fellow to the terrace, since his feet seemed almost useless. What a man for one so vivid, so alive as the Baroness to marry! Em had confided that the Baroness was an American and she had been upon the point of further revelations when something had interrupted. Perhaps the Baroness had exchanged words for a while? Strange, Bim reflected, what women considered worth while.

Laura Allan and Bunny Baird were sitting together and Laura was listening to him for once. Bob Trent still talked; Millicent fluttered at his side, trying to coax him into good nature. Mary was one of the little group about the Baron and Ted lounged against a table of magazines beside which the Baroness had seated herself. Ted was being his most charming self but the Baroness seemed to have lost interest in him for she answered his sallies in monosyllables or not at all, sitting there with her eyes down, fingering the magazines.

Suddenly she arose and murmuring something about having left her cigarette case in the library, went swiftly across the terrace and through the French door into the dining room.

She did not proceed to the library, however. Bim, seated directly in range with the door, was so placed as to command a view of the entire dining room and she watched in some surprise while the tall, dark woman paused beside the serving table. She looked tense and eager with her chin raised proudly and her gorgeous shoulders forward; standing with the light striking down on her blue black hair she seemed to flame like a dark and perhaps sinister jewel.

Bim saw the door to the serving pantry swing back and the butler step through. His head came up sharply at sight of the Baroness, he half wheeled about as if to retreat. But the woman crossed to him and began to speak in a hurried, earnest way. He shook his head and she put her hand on his arm; then he glanced down at the hand and it seemed to Bim that he witted somewhat—that his tall, lithe figure sagged.

Mysterious Actions.

They were standing thus when the door behind them again swung open. The Baroness started to snatch her hand away but held it suspended above the man's arm, fingers outspread as if they were frozen, as the two jerked about to confront the intruder—a youngish woman in the black dress and white cap and apron of a maid.

As long as she lived Bim was to remember the play of expression upon the face of the woman in the doorway. Amazement first, then horror, then panic. Snatching a white-cuffed hand against her mouth, she backed away but held the door flung to with a clatter upon her scream.

Screams, one after another pierced through the night, growing fainter when, as Bim imagined the woman retreated into the depths of the house. She saw the butler follow through the swinging door; she saw the Baroness glide into the shadows of the library and come sauntering out upon the terrace looking as remote, as unperturbed as if nothing had happened.

Em was on her feet booming questions as the butler emerged from the garden path which skirted the terrace and continued to the kitchen.

"Well, Williams?" bellowed Em. "It is nothing, madam," the man

ADVICE TO GIRLS

by Nancy Lee

DEAR NANCY LEE: Kindly permit a puzzled male to share some of your column's advice.

I'm late in my teens and several months ago was friendly with a girl a few years younger. She was the same towards me until the following incident took place:

I was driving along one Sunday and overtook another girl whom I knew and gave her a ride home, as I would anyone else. My friend saw me and when I saw her later, in spite of my explanation she would have nothing to do with me and the things she said weren't exactly complimentary.

I think she would speak now if I spoke first, but while I know that "I ain't heart never won fair lady," I feel as though she should talk first, as I did nothing against her.

Should I not pick up any more young ladies when I'm friendly with one, or what should I do?

STUMPED APLENTY: You certainly did your share when you explained the incident to the young lady and she should have accepted your version. Why not, however, be generous and be the first to talk when you meet again? Should there be a resumption of the friendship, you must make the girl understand that she must not be unreasonable again. Why shouldn't a man give a friend a lift when he overtakes her while driving. The young lady of whom you write should rejoice that you are so courteous.

Forty Different Kinds of Steel

That's how many varieties are used in the new Ford. A great reason why it gives service for years and years. The crankshaft and camshaft, for example, are of Ford carbon manganese steel. Valves are of chrome silicon alloy. Transmission gears and shafts are of chrome alloy steel, heat treated for hardness. Throughout there are many similar examples of specialized steels—all adding to the reliability and strength of the new Ford.

Protests Shooting of Does And Says It Is Unnecessary

vast amount of any species of wild life with our large population, but we can support a large portion of it by using our better judgment. Although man may have a coat of veneer from education that has made him the civilized creature he is today, he still has a little of that savage trait in him and if the law permits him he will kill without hesitating. There is something more about our wild life than just killing it. I have watched deer feeding and resting in their beds and I doubt if there is a more interesting or graceful creature in the woods.

Our Game Commissioners advise that our deer are underweight, due to lack of food and breeding conditions. The fall of 1929, according to our commission's figures, 22,822 buck deer were killed in Pennsylvania. The fall of 1928 the shooting of does was permitted. This of course gave the buck another year to put on more weight, and to increase the number of points to its antlers. In the vicinity where our party hunted there were 83 buck deer killed the first day of the season of 1929 and 90 per cent of these deer had from 4 to 5 points to an antler or 9 points to a set of horns. It is only natural that our deer will be small if killed off each year.

I have replies from game commissioners of several states in regards to killing of the doe deer. Mr. E. L. Flauders, Commissioner of the State of Vermont, writes: "Our law does not permit the shooting of female deer and so far we have not found it necessary to kill off the female deer in order to balance the herd. It apparently has been able to take care of itself in this respect, our hard winters and cat population seems to take care of the weaker deer. Under this method of hunting deer in most parts of our state it has steadily increased and we have no signs of weakness as yet. An open season on does means an indiscriminate killing."

John W. Titcomb, of Hartford, Conn., states: "Generally speaking the buck law is the only kind of law which will conserve your deer so that you will always have good hunting for them."

John T. McCormick, of Albany, N. Y., states: "The deer herd in this state is in very good condition and it is not necessary to permit the taking of the female deer to strengthen the herd."

The state of Missouri has no open season. The state of Indiana has no wild deer. The state of Maine with its 15,000,000 acres of woodland of which 9,000,000 acres are organized land heavily wooded. The taking of one deer of either sex is permitted. With the exception of Maine these states have experienced the doe shooting, which caused destruction to their deer herds.

The hunters of Pennsylvania will experience what the hunters of thirty-five years ago experienced if the doe shooting is permitted. We know it is impossible for every hunter that goes into the woods to kill a deer, but according to the literature I have here on my desk from the State it should be no trouble at all. Let us take the figures of 1930, the game commissioners inform us there were 100,000 men hunting for deer. Out of this number 80,000 hunters returned without killing their buck deer.

Our commissioners inform us there were 31,507 special doe licenses sold in 1930. Out of this number 6,000 hunters killed their doe, leaving 25,507 who did not kill a doe. There were some of these hunters, although they did not kill their doe did kill their buck. Our game commissioners stated that due to the cold weather the kill on doe was very low. This statement, I know, has given many a deer hunter a good laugh. What does the average deer hunter care about cold weather? He is not out to pick violets. He goes prepared for cold weather and will

Not "Burnt Out" Yet

By HARDIN BURNLEY

WYKOFF, Dyer, Simpson and Tolan, who did much incinerating of short cinder paths last season, are again promising to go after new dash records during 1931. They are prepared to withstand the shock of comparative youth personified, for example, by Ira Singer, the New York University sensation. None of the four has yet reached his sprinting prime though all are verging on it.

Far out West, Frank Wykoff will renew his duel with "Hec" Dyer at the 100 yards while the latter will continue his 220 efforts as well. Unless unexpected misadventure occurs, both will enter most of the important national meets in 1931 and they'll undoubtedly be thinking of 1932 Olympic chances. George Simpson, of Ohio State, who did the century in 9 1/5 starting from blocks, will keep trying for that 9 flat ideal.

Eddie Tolan, Michigan's "Midnight Express," who made a hundred in 9 1/2 without starting blocks, is reported as ready for another rigorous campaign. The colored flyer is a muscular, chunky specimen seemingly built for durability. As yet, his steel spring legs show no sign of the inevitable burning process—the old wear and tear that have retired such modern wonders as Jack Elder, Loren Murchison, "Chet" Bowman, et al. That's the fate of all other great speedsters who flash three, four or five years in the dashes until the asbestos of youth no longer saves their piston rods from time's fire. Tolan looks to be the toughest of all current dash marvels. But sometimes the hardest-looking athletes "burn out" overnight when their drive loses but a fraction of its pep.

By the way, reports from California indicate that "Charley" Paddock, once called "The Fastest Human," is planning a come-back and practicing full of 1932 Olympic hopes. Stop-watches have tabbed him often at 10:1-5, but he'll have to clip at least 2-5 off that to step along successfully with Wykoff, Dyer, Simpson, Tolan and their ilk.
